Manaaki New Zealand Short Term Training Scholarships Good Governance - Online ASEAN 2026-2027

Overview

The New Zealand Government's Manaaki New Zealand Scholarship Programme is pleased to offer an online Good Governance course for ASEAN scholars, supported by the New Zealand International Development Cooperation Programme.

The Good Governance Course supports ASEAN leaders in building inclusive, transparent, and resilient governance systems. Covering topics from human rights and anti-corruption to climate policy and digital governance, the course draws on regional case studies and New Zealand expertise to strengthen public sector leadership and sustainable development.

This is an intensive short course designed for participants from eligible countries in the ASEAN region who are currently in middle and senior management positions and currently working in relevant sectors.

The online course is run part time over a five-week period and will be run by the University of Auckland's Public Policy Institute. The expectation would be that scholars are available to complete the entire learning programme over the five weeks online.

While this course does not constitute a formal tertiary qualification it will provide scholars with unique insights into New Zealand approaches and best practice in each sectoral study area.

On completion each scholar will be awarded a completion certificate from the Manaaki New Zealand Scholarships Programme.

The team of presenters are authorities in agribusiness, food safety, climate smart agri-food systems and related value chain topics.

Associate Professor Ramilan Thiagarajah, Academic Lead

Associate Professor Ramilan Thiagarajah is an agribusiness and food systems expert at Massey University's School of Agriculture and Environment. He holds a PhD in Agricultural and Resource Economics from the University of Waikato, New Zealand. He has been the academic leader for the MFAT funded Agribusiness Value chain Course for the ASEAN region, from 2017 to 2025. His work focuses on food systems transformation and climate-smart and nutrition-sensitive agricultural value chains. He has expertise in farm and food systems analysis by developing whole farm household models and system dynamics modelling for value chain analysis from market and bioeconomic perspectives. For over two decades, he has actively engaged in bioeconomic modelling of food systems to enhance climate resilience across Australasia, Africa, and Asia. Previously, as an International Scientist at CGIAR, he was a resource person modelling climate smart agricultural interventions for the West African farm households. Currently, he is leading crucial research on estimating abatement costs of green house gas mitigation options in dairy systems funded by the New Zealand Ministry for Primary Industries.
